WASHINGTON CITY:

THURSDAY December 5, 1872.

Holiday Goods. Now is the time for dealers in all classes of holiday goods to advertise their wares. The largest and best purchasers almost invariably make their selections early in the season while stocks are full and varied, and before the rush o !customers has set in. Those who are the first to make known to the public the attractions they propose to hold out are therefore sure to reap the richest harvest. We need hardly add, that to do this thoroughly the columns Of THE STAR should be used. As an advertising medium it is concededly worth all the other papers in the city added together.

The Presidential Succession.

The death of Mr. Greeley has caused considerable newspaper discussion as to what would have been the result of that event had a majority of electors in his favor been chosen. In answer to a correspondent, who inquires whether in the event of Gen. Grant's death before the 4th of March next another election would be necessary; and if not, who would be President or would legally act as such, the New York Sun says that if Gen. Grant should die after he has been declared elected, and before he is inaugurated, there would be no occasion for a new election; Vice-President Wilson would at once take his place and be inaugurated as President. If Mr. Wilson should then die at any time before the expiration of his term on March 4, 1877, he would be temporarily succeeded by the President of the Senate; or if that office should happen to be vacant, by the Speaker of the House; and under the law a new election would at once be ordered upon a notification issued by the Secretary of State. The constitution provides that if there should be a space of two months between the date of the notification and the first Wednesday in December next ensuing, the election which it calls for must be held within thirty-four days preceding the said first Wednesday; but if there is not such a space of two months between the notification and this first Wednesday, the election will take place at the same period in the following year. The President so elected enters upon his office on March 4 next following, and holds it for a full term of four years.

An appreciative article in the Tribune, on "Mr. Greeley as a man of letters" treats upon a side of Mr. Greeley's nature not so open to the public eye as the exhibition of his qualities as a journalist, politician, and statesman. Only the few knew how strong was his love of the best books, and how delicate, and even fastidious were his literary tastes. In his early life he wrote a good deal of verse, and this though not of a high or important order, always exhibited elegance and a careful study of the poetical models then most in vogue; and also showed, what the world hardly gave Mr. Greeley the credit for possessing, a tender sensibility, and unaffected love of the beautiful. Like many other men who find the business of actual life too engross" ing to permit a continuance of their young love of the ideal, Mr. Greeley may have for the most part ceased to write, but he never ceased to be a reader of poetry. In this his taste was almost infallible, and the accuracy of his literary judgment was shown, also, in his selections for the New Forker. This critical skill Mr. Greeley well in the Tribune, he usually took occasion to found a man, young or old, writing badly, he had a very decisive way of hinting either at reformation or resignation. As a writer of pure, simple, and direct English, Mr. Greeley is entitled to a high rank. His knowledge of the laws of the language was excellent, and in all the haste and heat of newspaper composition he rarely violated them. Generally, his leading articles were models of their kind. They were arranged with a sort of mathematical precision and both in their facts and their argumentation they were apt to be troublesome to his antago nists. If the subject were one which excited the writer so that he became thoroughly earnest his tine powers of sareasm, of irony, and sometimes of wholesome vituperation, were exhibited

The Springfield Republican proposes three planks for the new liberal platform: Direct election of President and Vice President by the people; extension of the presidential term to six years; the one-term principle. In behalf of the first proposition that paper maintains that the device of our electoral college has been as useless as the fifth wheel on a coach, from the first; and point's out the unfortunate position of affairs should the successful presidential candidate die before the college had met-the perplexity of the electors-the agitation of the country-the effects of the suspense upon business. On the other hand, we would suggest that without the instrumentality of an electoral ticket there would be the probability of a greater number of a candidates and a scrub race for the presidency, with the danger of a failure to elect by the people, and the necessity to refer the matter to the House of Representatives for a choice; a process not commended by the light of experience.

The audacity of crime in New York is illustrated by a recent incident in that city. On Sunday last five pickpockets jumped on a street car, whereupon the conductor thought he would be but doing his duty to his passengers by announcing the presence of the light-fingered gentlemen. This he did, when the pickpockets left incontinently. Enraged by thus being baifled in relieving unsuspecting people of their pocketbooks, they waited in an unfrequented lecality for the return of the same car, and jumping nion the platform proceeded to illustrate the frontispiece of the conductor, one of them laying his head open with a slung-shot. This conductor is hardly likely to interfere with their

Reference was made in THE STAR a few days ago to Postmaster General Creswell's recommendation relative to the postal telegraph. In answer to the queries of an interviewer, recently, Mr. Creswell expressed himself very earnestly in favor of the system and said it ought to be no more impossible now to transmit a telegraphic message from New York to San Francisco for ten cents than it was once deemed to mail a letter from New York to New Orleans

AuGusta, November 9, 1859.

Dr. Wm. H. Tutt: Dear Sir-I kave long been a sufferer of torpor of the Liver and Dyspepsia, and in search of relief I have tried almost every Medical recommended for those diseases, but have never derived half the benefit from any of them as I have from your Vegetable Liver Pills. They are invaluable, and I would recommend to all with Dyspepsia, Sick Headache and Billionsness. Yours truly, W. J. BLAIR, Lafe of Danville, Va. mendation relative to the postal telegraph. In for that amount. He does not believe the postal telegraph would be made a political machine in the hands of the Government.

One paper-the Cincinnati Enquirer-thinks it would be treating Grats Brown very badly not to give him the vote of the Greeley electors for the position and " contingent succession" to which he was nominated. That is, the Enquirer supposes "that the electors will take no notice of the demise of Mr. Greeley, but vote-as they were expected to-for him for President and ccession to the Presidency of the latter." he " contingent succession" to the candidacy a man who is dead for a place that has been miled, is rather a thin honor.

Mr. Summer doesn't get a good word from any quarter in behalf of his proposal to strike from the army register and the regimental colors the names of the battles of the rebellion. North, South, East, and West alike object to it, and the ex Confederates quite as warmly as the Unionsts. There seems no more reason why the names of these battles should be struck from the record than that the names of the great battles between England and Scotland, of which both are proud, should be stricken from history because the two nations are now peacefully blended.

The underwriters of Baltimere are taking steps to raise the rates of insurance, as they have been raised at other places since the recent great losses by fire. It is held that the present rates are not adequate for the protection of insurance capital, or, in other words, the protection of insurers, securing them certain indemmity in case of loss of their property.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL. The Wall street markets were very dull yesterday. The advices from London continue favorable both as regards the market for securities and that for money. The latter is easy with the indications pointing to lower rates. The money market in New York is somewhat stringent. Government bonds were firm in both New York and London yesterday. In the stock market the activity was confined to Rock Island and Pacific mail. The general market was steady but extremely dull.

DLIVING ADVERTISEMENTS.

A medicine that has done more than all the prescriptions of the pharmscop wia to protect the human system against the bodily ills superinduced by unhealthy surroundings, is, certainly worthy of universal confidence. It is mainly on account of its extraordinary preventive properties that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters are so exceedingly popular in localities subject to the visitation of miasmatic fevers and other diseases produced by empeisoned air. A family that has escaped sickness during a sickly season in consequence of using the Bitters as a safeguard, is a living advertisement of the virtues of the preparation. The whole neighborhood realize the fact. "I couldn't have believed it," says one. "I scarcely credited the advertisements; but one believes what one sees," says another. "It is the very thing we need in this unwhelesome section of country," remarks a third-And the result is that the instinct of self defense the first law of nature, induces three-fourths of that community to obtain a supply of the "reat vegetable antidote before the next sickly season sets in. In winter, when the system requires extra vigor and elasticity to enable it to baffle the effects of damp and cold, the Bitters will be found particularly ser viceable. Bheumatism will not be apt to fasten upon muscles and nerves that have been braced up by this excellent invigorant and nervine; nor will the severities of the season, which have such a disastrous effect on the pulmonary organs of the feeble and delicate, be likely to exercise the same untoward influence in cases where the stomach and the external surface of the body (which always sympathizes with the digestive organs) have been toned as d stimulated by a course of the restorative.
